Media affects body image

Liesel Julsrud
Activities Co-Editor

Whether it be the #thighgap or #swole fad, or embracing who people are, everyone is in a constant battle with what society's standards for the ideal human body are. The message one often gets is that the truly happy human must look like Jess Day from New Girl in a dress, or have the stamina of Jesse Pinkman in Breaking Bad.

This conflict is primarily seen in high schoolers, with over 50 percent of them convinced that society pressures them to change their body image. The media sets the standard on how the ideal human should look.

With almost 98 percent of teenagers watching television nationwide, this standard becomes more engraved in people's minds.

"I think the media has projected certain images of what kinds of people we should be, instead of encouraging us to celebrate who we are," said senior, Kaitlin Scott. "No one can reach their full potential if they are constantly trying to fit an image of something they are not."

Many might think they are alone in this situation, but in reality, Stages of Life reports that 20 percent of high schoolers, males and females, are "rarely" or "never" happy with their body image. This mentality, if not cured, could lead to mental illness such as depression or eating disorders which seems to be a recurring issue in the high school scene.

The O'Gorman counselors have taken a stronger stance to help prevent students from falling into this position, through either meetings or the Helpline. "Body image is one more pressure students pile on," says counselor Mrs. Kelly Jones. "We are always open to students or peers to talk about the situation through meeting or the peer relations page."

Blue Ribbon awarded

Abby Baka
Entertainment Editor

O'Gorman High School was named one of 48 National Blue Ribbon Schools on Sept. 30, making it the only school in South Dakota to have received the award three times.

The National Blue Ribbon program has been in place since 1982. O'Gorman first won the award in 1985 and again in 2005.

Seniors Luke Miller and Graham Sudenga were selected to deliver the announcement to the students at an assembly on Tuesday, Sept. 30.

"I feel honored to attend O'Gorman," said Miller. "Everyone supports each other and we deserve to be recognized for it."

The National Blue Ribbon Program awards public and private schools based on outstanding academics and success in closing achievement gaps among student subgroups. The award is given to affirm the efforts of students, educators, families and communities in providing academically challenging schools.

Principal Kyle Groos and assistant principal Joan Mahoney assembled the Blue Ribbon application, which must contain five years worth of data and a narrative describing the school's academics, activities, use of technology and facilities. Groos and Mahoney spent approximately 40 hours over three months filling out the application.

"We wanted to do it right," said Groos. "We had to give them a snapshot of O'Gorman without them having to walk through our doors."

The Blue Ribbon award will be presented in Washington D.C. on Nov. 10-11. The O'Gorman staff selected Jane Bradfield to represent the school at the U.S. Department of Education recognition ceremony.

The school will receive a National Blue Ribbon School flag and plaque. Bradfield will also attend networking sessions to meet with educators from across the country and U.S. Department of Education officials.

"O'Gorman High School is indeed a very special place and I'm blessed to be a part of it," said Bradfield. "To be one of 48 high schools in the nation to be recognized as a Blue Ribbon School is a remarkable achievement."

School celebrates good driving habits with online contest

Samantha Lenz
Opinion Editor

This year O'Gorman High School participated in the Celebrate My Drive contest powered by State Farm. Last year, O'Gorman received a $25,000 grant for being in the top 90 schools.

"In this day and age people are less aware of what they're doing and more distracted while they're driving," said senior Kylie Lamberty. "It is causing way more harmful situations. To me it's really important to have people realize this, especially with having a younger brother who plays outside all the time. I couldn't imagine having something happen to him from distracted driving."

The top ten grand prize winners receive a $100,000 grant, with the top two receiving a concert from Grammy Nominated The Band Perry, and the bottom 90 receive $25,000. This means the top 100 schools with the most commitments share in a total of $3.25 million in grants.

"Celebrate My Drive shows solidarity," said theology teacher Michelle Shields. "It brings together the students, the alumni and the community."

Last year more than 6.3 million safe driving commitments were made in support of high schools across the United States and Canada.

"I think it's really cool that we took this opportunity again to make money for our school," said senior Lauren Weber.

Supporters had the chance to help by making a safe driving commitment on behalf of O'Gorman High School once a day during national teen driver safety week, Oct. 15-24.

Former Catholic elementary school principal becomes academic services teacher

Shreya Chandran
Activities Co-Editor

This year O'Gorman welcomes back a familiar face to the Sioux Falls Catholic Schools.

Katie Kerkvliet, formerly the principal of St. Katharine Drexel, now resides at O'Gorman as an academic services teacher. With five years of principal experience and nine years of teaching experience, Kerkvliet is not new to offering academic aid.

Being able to offer academic aid at O'Gorman High School is an opportunity Kerkvliet appreciates.

"I am grateful that we can tie our faith into everything we do," said Kerkvliet. "There is such a family atmosphere in our strong, united community, and our excellence in academics and activities is top-notch."

The switch from principal to academic services teacher was ideal.

Katie Kerkvliet

"I've always enjoyed working with students with special needs and decided I would try high school," said Kerkvliet. "When I decided to go back to teaching, there was no doubt in my mind that I wanted to stay part of SFCS not only because of the faith aspect, but because of the community and excellence in all that we do."

Thanksgiving celebrated across nation

Samantha Lenz
Opinion Editor

For most Americans Thanksgiving Day is a day to celebrate family unity. Besides the traditional get-together and the big meal, there is also a religious meaning to this holiday.

"My family lives across the United States. Thanksgiving is the day that we all come together," said senior Lizzie Pollard. "It's exciting to see how my little cousins grow since the last time I saw them."

Every year Thanksgiving is celebrated on Nov. 27. Originally, pilgrims gathered to give thanks to God for the abundance of the harvest in the new world. Although Thanksgiving is not a day of obligation on the Catholic calendar, the liturgical calendar of the church celebrates it with readings from the Old and New Testament with symbolic meaning. This is why Catholics are encouraged to celebrate Thanksgiving with a deep sense of prayer, gratitude and joy.

"Thanksgiving is important to me because it's time to grow closer to your family and friends by giving thanks for all you have received," said senior Taryn Kloth.

"It's a time to grow closer to your family and friends."
- Taryn Kloth

O'Gorman students and staff get into the spirit of Thanksgiving by celebrating Mass. Afterward students from each grade give a speech dedicated to something they are thankful for this season. Often the speeches are focused around school, friends, family and faith.

"I think it was really cool to represent the freshman class," said junior Alex Anderson who gave the Thanksgiving speech two years prior. "People actually cared about what I had to say, like they didn't think I was a complete goon."

With Black Friday being the day after Thanksgiving, students often get sidetracked forgetting the true meaning of the holiday.

"You need to give thanks with your family," said senior Karl Shlanta. "We have so much to be thankful for."

The O'Gorman Thanksgiving Mass will be held on Wednesday Nov. 26.

Seminary invites students to visit, explore vocation

Cheyenne Chontos
Editor-in-Chief

This November male students who are 16 and older have the opportunity to visit the St. John Vianney Seminary at the University of St. Thomas. Students will have the chance to explore the seminary and visit with current seminarians.

"My goal for this visit is that all the men who go would witness the joy the seminarians have in living out their vocation," said campus minister Jonathan Konz. "The seminarians of our diocese are some of the most fully alive people you will ever meet. They are actively engaged in finding out why they are here. It's because of their focused pursuit of Christ and God's will in their lives that they are becoming more fully themselves and more fully alive."

Father Shaun Haggerty also stated that a goal of the visit is to show how the seminarians lived.

"I want to normalize the priesthood and seminary life. Many misconceptions are out there," said Haggerty.

One student planning on going on the visit is senior Luke Miller.

"I'm going to help discern whether or not I'm called to someday be a priest," said Miller. "It'll be fun to hang out with fun people and learn more about the seminary process."

The visit will last from Nov. 13-15. Haggerty and Konz will chaperone the students during the visit. Haggerty is in charge of the visit as he is the vocations director.

Senior Karl Shlanta is another student who is planning to go on the visit.

"It'll be good to learn more about the seminary," said Shlanta. "I'm going to treat this a lot like a college tour."

Konz also said that the trip will be treated more like a college visit than anything else.

"Going on this visit isn't a commitment to the priesthood; it's just like any other college visit," said Konz. "It's an opportunity to explore the vocation Christ may be calling you to."

Another visit is scheduled for Dec. 4-6 to St. Mary's University of Minnesota. There will be another visit in the spring, but plans for that are not finalized as of yet.

Knights struggle in home games, enter playoffs as title contender

Liesel Julsrud
Activities Co-Editor

As the regular football season came to a close and state playoffs began, the Knights football team proved themselves as strong contenders.

The season has consisted of a 5-3 record, which put them fourth seeded for the playoffs.

"We felt pretty confident going into the playoffs," said senior defensive back Mitchell Jarding. "Playoffs are basically a new season and we have to forget about what has happened and come with a new attitude, so seeding isn't that important."

The Knights have won every away game during the season, yet have shown a struggle to pull through in the home games. Home games were more difficult though due to the fact that they faced tougher opponents.

The team has also shown a struggle to keep up with their opponent during the second half of the game.

"We really only play halves, rather than the entire game which is why we get caught up and make mistakes," said Jarding.

The Knights opened their playoff run against Aberdeen Central on Oct. 27 at McEneaney Field.

Chemistry on tennis team earns another title

Nate Sotebeer
Sports Editor

The O'Gorman Lady Knights tennis team earned their eighth straight state title on Oct. 11 in Rapid City.

This year's team had chemistry from their experience and relationships off the court.

"We were close overall as a team," said head coach Don Barnes.

Sidney Brower and Morgan Brower displayed this chemistry as the sister duo won the flight one state doubles title.

"I liked it because I could talk with her on the court," said Morgan Brower. "We played together before, and we played well together."

Competitive cheer scraps through Metro, Brandon competitions

Samantha Lenz
Opinion Editor

The O'Gorman Lady Knights competitive cheerleading team intends to have a repeat of last year's finish, as being one of the five sports to win a state championship title.

During the Brandon Valley Invite, the team experienced some technical difficulties resulting in a third place finish.

"I feel like we knew what we had to do to win, and it just didn't happen for us at this competition," said senior Kenzie Fischer. "But we're already determined on pulling through by the end of this year."

At the Metro Conference competition, the Lady Knights competed against the three other Sioux Falls high schools. While there, the team was able to take first place only by a margin of one point.

"It was good timing to get back on top," said senior Kayley Welch. "It gave us a good confidence boost with state being the next competition."

Between the O'Gorman Knights, Washington Warriors and Roosevelt Rough Riders the finish is expected to be anyone's game.

"Our routine is solid and there hasn't been any team winning consistently," said senior Rachel Hickman. "I think it's all going to be about who wants it most that day."

The state cheerleading competition was held on Sat. Oct 25 in Watertown.

Lady Knights roll through season, set for title run

Nate Sotebeer
Sports Editor

The O'Gorman Lady Knights volleyball team has continued their winning ways from last year, earning a 23-4 record as of press time with all of their losses coming to out of state teams. The team won the state title last season and is looking to do the same this year.

"We still try and focus on one match at a time and never look past the next match we play," said head coach Julie Kolbeck. This discipline has been a key to the Lady Knights success this season against top opponents.

This feeling has permeated through the program, from coaches down to the players.

"Our coaches tell us that you have to come out hard for every single game because everyone is trying to beat you," said senior libero Katie Kunkel.

The team's experience in high pressure tournament games is expected to help them as the season progresses through higher stakes matches.

"There is always pressure that you put on yourself," said Kolbeck. "Pressure is good and it keeps you on your toes, helping you compete at a high level."

This has helped the team in their preparations for the post-season.

"We're kind of used to the stressful situations," said Kunkel. "Our coaches prepare us really well."

Kolbeck credits senior leadership as a key to this season's success, along with the closeness of the team overall.

"When things aren't quite right, they're the first ones to call the group on it," said Kolbeck.

District action began Tuesday, Nov. 4 and continues tomorrow, Nov. 8.

Lady Knights soccer earns second in state, battles through multiple injuries

Cheyenne Chontos
Editor-in-Chief

On Oct. 11 the Lady Knights soccer team played their last game of the season in the state tournament. The Knights lost 3-1 against Lincoln High School.

"We played hard all season," said team captain and senior Kylie Lamberty. "We worked well together to possess the ball, and we had strong defense."

The Lady Knights faced a challenge this season that is not unusual for sports – injuries. The team in total had three torn ACLs, two concussions, and a few ankle injuries.

"Our schedule was tough, and we didn't have much rest between games," said coach Ryan Beier. "We had enough good players to step in to positions and compensate."

The final record for the Lady Knights this season was 11-3-1.

School welcomes SDSU graduate as newest member of language dept.

A new German teacher was introduced to the O’Gorman world language department this fall. Saskia Edwards, a South Dakota State University graduate and German native, has her bachelor’s degree in German along with an endorsement for English as a second language and a minor in health education.

“So far this year has been busy but good,” said Edwards. “Everyone [at O’Gorman] has been very kind and supportive.”

Students have so far been positive about the new addition to the department.

“Frau Edwards is really good with the class,” said sophomore Tom Fritz. “She’s really nice.”

Senior Brett Duffek also said he is happy to have Edwards as a teacher.

“She brings a lot of energy

Saskia Edwards

and a new perspective to class,” said Duffek. “She’s also really easy to approach, which I think is a great quality for a teacher.”

Along with leading O’Gorman’s International Club and teaching German Edwards is also in charge of the three week German exchange student program.

“I’m very excited to be a part of this program and for the rest of the year,” said Edwards.

School set to host annual fundraiser with magazine sales

Connor Bell
Staff Writer

The magazine drive is an annual event that O’Gorman holds. This event allows students to raise money for the school and school-related activities. Some students go out and sell magazine subscriptions to family and friends, while others simply make a donation to the school.

“The students try to work very hard for the main goal which is overflowing with lavish prizes,” said theology teacher Ms. Michelle Shields. However those prizes must remain a surprise until the magazine drive kicks off.

Last year, upperclassmen received open campus and lunch privileges while underclassmen were able to have a full lunch period. Prizes also included dress down days every Monday through Easter.

Most students want to have some of the same prizes but also get some newer and better prizes to create a bigger incentive. “We should use some of the same prizes but also change them for the better,” said junior Noah Bell.

The students are excited for the magazine drive and for all of the prizes that come with it. “The Magazine drive is a fun way to come together and raise money for the school,” said senior Kate Cartwright.

From the money raised during the fundraiser, 40 percent goes to O’Gorman and 20 percent of the magazine sales go to particular organizations that students list. The main goal for this year is $120,000.

Marching season closes with high hopes for future

Marisa Moser
Staff Writer

After a rough start in Marshall, Minn. at the beginning of the season, O’Gorman High School’s marching band bounced back quickly, placing second in Luverne and Brandon.

They went on to host and march as an exhibition band at the Festival of Bands on Oct. 4, along with Lincoln, Washington and Roosevelt.

“A lot of us felt like that was our best performance so far in the year,” said senior Sam Lacasse.

With the start of a new season and the arrival of new director Ben Koch, the band worked to adapt with new changes.

“Band chemistry was a bit rough in transition between directors, but by the end of the season, things were much more efficient and fluid,” said Lacasse. “I thought Mr. Koch did a great job this year and I think he’ll get even better in shaping future years.”

“I think Mr. Koch did a great job this year.”
-Sam Lacasse

“We focused on relearning the fundamentals of marching band which ended up helping us improve overall, and in every aspect,” said senior Anna Andrews. “It was challenging transitioning with a new director who has a different way of doing things than most of us were used to, but O’G did great this year.”

The band placed second in Orange City, Iowa in addition to winning Best Drumline. In their final competition at the Quad State Tournament in Vermillion, they narrowly placed second by only 0.2 points.

Band members have high hopes for future seasons.

“I really mean it when I say that I think our band will be able to compete with Roosevelt and Brandon in a couple of years, if the underclassmen keep up the hard work,” said Lacasse.

Lacasse also noted that O’Gorman’s band found it challenging to compete with several schools’ extensive prop resources.

“I would really love to see our march-for-fun band beat them for a change,” said Lacasse.

Exchange students arrive in Sioux Falls experience American, Midwest culture

Christopher Vaska
Staff Writer

Students are abuzz at O’Gorman with the arrival of this year’s German exchange students.

Many students, including Jordan Anderson, a freshman in German I, were eager to meet them.

“I was excited to meet the exchange students, and I hope to maybe make some friends among them during their time here,” said Anderson.

In the past, these exchanges have been organized by Kristin Kuchenbecker, but since her departure, this responsibility has fallen upon the new German instructor, Saskia Edwards.

“We held a potluck for the German students for when they arrived,” said Edwards. O’Gorman is participating in the exchange program through the German American Partnership Program (GAPP), which was arranged through the U.S. Department of State. This will be O’Gorman’s fifth year exchanging with Germany.

Every other summer, select O’Gorman students go to Germany to see the German culture as well. When the select O’Gorman students visit Germany, they visit many places in Germany and surrounding countries.

The exchange students, who are here from Oct. 20 to Nov. 8, will follow their host “Sibling” to the host’s classes while at O’Gorman.

This has many students excited, like Daniel Stork, a senior. Stork has been involved in German for several years and is currently in German IV.

While not participating as a host student this year, he was excited to meet the exchange students. “I met a lot of them last year, and I looked forward to meeting them this year,” said Stork. He found himself preparing for their arrival. “I was practicing German more, especially speaking in German.”

Aladdin takes audience to whole new world

Grace Wallin
Staff Writer

This fall's featured children's play at O'Gorman is The Magical Lamp of Aladdin.

Most people are familiar with the Disney film adaptation of Aladdin. However, students can expect to see some new twists in this version which is set to debut on Nov. 21.

The play follows the journey of the charming "street-rat" Aladdin who falls in love with the beautiful Princess Jasmine. Along the way Aladdin is joined by his loyal monkey companion and a genie whom he frees from a magical lamp. Elaborate costumes and sets will aid the actors in building an imaginative show for all to enjoy.

Although the show is geared towards a younger audience, long-time children's play director Scott Nelson says, "There is always going to be something for everyone."

Junior Megan Kueter has participated in the children's play in the past. "The children's play is finding a perfect balance of hard work and fun to create a show that will bring a fantasy story to life," says Keuter.

The student cast will work for several weeks after school to develop the production into a polished performance.

Although it is the actors that bring the characters to life, the show would not be possible without the efforts of the behind the scenes crews. "I'm truly blessed with the tech and costuming," says Nelson.

Their work with the sound effects, costumes and sets is essential in making a performance engaging.

The children's play is also an opportunity for the theater students to encourage the youth to get involved when they come to O'Gorman. One of the highlights for the cast members is meeting with the children after the performance and signing their programs.

"The children are the best part about being in the play," says senior drama student Sam Maxwell. "We give them an escape from the real world and let them use their imagination in a live setting."

The children's play will be an entertaining performance with a lot to offer for students, children and parents. There will be many opportunities for students and their families to see the show as performances will take place on Nov. 21-23 in the Lorang Theater. Showings are at 7 p.m. on Friday; 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Saturday; and 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Netflix holds cinematic gems; Mud, One Day make for good viewing

Liesel Julsrud

As the school year begins to seem longer, procrastination levels become higher. With this, people often find themselves looking to Netflix as a resort or a comfort spot of some sort.

There comes a time, however, when people race through season nine of How I Met Your Mother, binge on Breaking Bad and eventually have nowhere else to go. Amongst the failed indie films and low-budget Sci-Fi movies, there are a few hidden gems on Netflix.

If one is looking for a sappy romance movie, One Day is a great choice. Starring Anne Hathaway and Jim Sturgess, this romance-drama sends the viewer on a roller coaster of emotions. The story is about Emma Morley (Hathaway) and Dexter Mayhew (Sturgess) who meet on July 15 after their graduation and agree to stay friends. Morley and Mayhew meet up every year after that for 23 years on July 15 (hence the title) to reconnect. This movie, as heart-warming as it is heart-wrenching, makes for a great Saturday night movie.

"Among the failed indie films and low-budget Sci-Fi movies, there are a few hidden gems on Netflix."

For those that are searching for a great drama-thriller, Mud will surely not disappoint. Best Actor winner at the 2014 Oscars, Matthew McConaughey stars in this adventure film. Dealing with a man named Mud who hides on an island with dark secrets and only two teenage boys to confide in, this movie is sure to captivate its audience.

True Blue...Again

It’s easy for a bunch of cynical high school students to complain about their school, but as we approach Thanksgiving it’s time to step back and be grateful for the fact that we have the opportunity to attend a high school that has been named a National Blue Ribbon School thrice.

I know it’s been overplayed, and we are all ready to move on from the celebrations, but before you roll your eyes at me, put aside the sarcasm and think about what a true privilege it is to attend O’Gorman.

Despite our numerous, often petty complaints, we have to admit that O’Gorman is doing something right. Our entire building (yes, even the band and choir rooms!) is now air conditioned, our performing arts center is unparalleled and our test scores are significantly above the national average. Mr. Groos must be doing something worthwhile in that office of his, because no one becomes a Blue Ribbon principal by watching ESPN all day.

And the “Blue Ribbon community rally” wasn’t entirely unbearable. Despite the cheesy decorative plants and insensitive Nazi jokes, it was a nice excuse to have a shortened class schedule, and the t-shirts were very soft.

O’Gorman really does go above and beyond in creating an academically excellent learning community, and the students and staff deserve to be recognized for what we do. I, for one, am very grateful for the opportunity to attend this school, even if it means that I own more khakis than blue jeans.

If celebrating the school’s accomplishments means cupcakes, balloon releases, free t-shirts and extra open campus privileges, then I will not complain about the extreme extent of our festivities.

This Thanksgiving I am extremely grateful that my parents “had faith in their child’s education.” I may not tell them that enough, but they usually read my articles, so they’ll find out.

And, really, our ACT scores are pretty fantastic.
